About the book

You can change the path on which the world is travelling.

A boy and his dog go on an extraordinary and enlightening adventure into the past and discover a cleaner and less polluted world, where they meet some extremely intelligent girls with clever and inspiring ideas.

Getting home presents a practical problem, but with the help of the creative Goddess Freya, and his own ingenuity, the boy manages the seemingly impossible.

Featuring beautiful and lively original watercolour illustrations, A Story for the Children of Today will engage, educate and excite readers both young and old.

About the author

Diana Thomson is a sculptor who studied at Kingston Polytechnic (now University) Sculpture Department, obtaining a BA in Fine Art.

She wrote and illustrated this book not only for her grandchildren, Albie and Freya, but also for all children, in the hope they will have a future in a less polluted world.

“When we really want to do something, we find a way to do it.”
