

The Song-Sayer's Lament

DAVID EBSWORTH

In the lands once named Britannia by the Empire and its vanished Legions, the Oak Seers' song-sayers still weave their words into the lore by which everyday life is ordered, into the myths and sagas of hero-tales, and into the very fates that will determine whether the years ahead shall be bathed in shining light or plunged into a terrible darkness.

In his fifth novel, David Ebsworth brings to life the stories of young warlord Ambros Skyhound, and the blind song-sayer, Morgose, told through the words of teacher and mentor Meridden of Sea Fort.

About the Author

David Ebsworth is the pen name of writer Dave McCall, a former negotiator and Regional Secretary for Britain's Transport & General Workers' Union. He was born in Liverpool (UK) but has lived in Wrexham, North Wales, with his wife, Ann, since 1981. Following his retirement, Dave began to write seriously in 2009.

To find out more about on the author and his work, visit his website: www.davidebsworth.com.

Title	The Song-Sayer's Lament: A Novel of Sixth-Century Britain
Author	David Ebsworth
ISBN	978-1-78132-511-7 (paperback) 978-1-78132-512-4 (ebook)
RRP	£10.99 (paperback) £3.49 (ebook) 229 x 152mm

Bookseller and library discounts available
Published by SilverWood Books

Available to order from bookshops, online retailers, and directly from the publisher

