About the book

Hector is baking a cake for his Granny and he's determined that it's going to be perfect.

But when he discovers that the peanut butter jar is empty, Hector decides that he must head out to find some more, or else his perfect cake will be ruined.

As time begins to run out, Hector's luck begins to run out too.

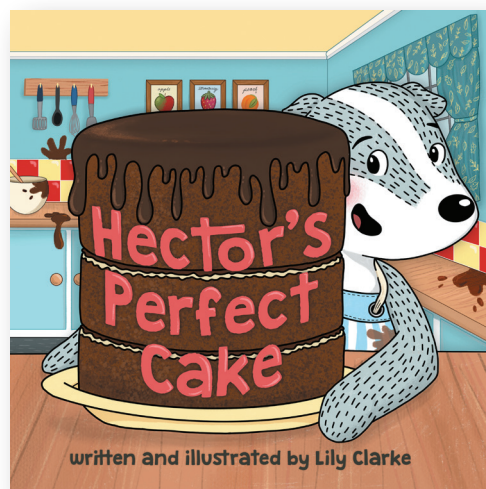

He may have to accept that sometimes, perfection just isn't possible...

About the author

Lily Clarke is the author and illustrator of Hector's Perfect Cake.

She studied Physics at the University of York and now works as an innovation consultant in Cambridge. When she doesn't have her nose in a book, she runs a small business called Lily in Space Designs, where she sells a range of illustrated products inspired by books and nature. Her favourite animals are badgers, birds and bats, (although she also loves animals that don't begin with the letter B!).
