

Advance Information

INTENT to DECEIVE

DAVE OLIVER

Key selling points

- A thrilling debut inspired by the author's real-life experiences as a naval officer, business leader and a political appointee.
- The first in a series which will appeal to fans of Philip Kerr, John le Carré, and Robert Harris.

About the book

A beautiful Russian double agent narrowly escapes certain death on a Russian waterfront. She subsequently uses her Olympic high bar experience to vault past two assassination attempts. Anastasia has no idea who has betrayed her and intends her harm – are her enemies Russian, Kazakh, Chechen, or the CIA? And she is completely unaware of how these perfidies are related to missing Kazakhstani nuclear warheads – weapons that will soon be threatening the safety of tens of millions of innocent people.

Does Anastasia need the assistance of the American submarine captain who retrieved her under fire from Vladivostok? Will her pride even permit him to help? Together will they be able to thwart the international thieves? And will love, death or the mushroom of a nuclear explosion bloom on the snowy steppes of Kazakhstan?

About the author

Dave Oliver was born in Indiana and educated at the United States Naval Academy. In the Navy he served aboard several types of ships and commanded a nuclear submarine. Dave also worked in business at Airbus and as a political appointee in the Department of Defense.

Will love, death or the mushroom of a nuclear explosion
conquer?
