Key selling points

- This moving saga explores emigration, love, and resilience.
- Delve into this romance spanning across one woman's extraordinary lifetime.
- A vividly descriptive read for fans of historical fiction, set across India and Italy in the twentieth century.

About the book

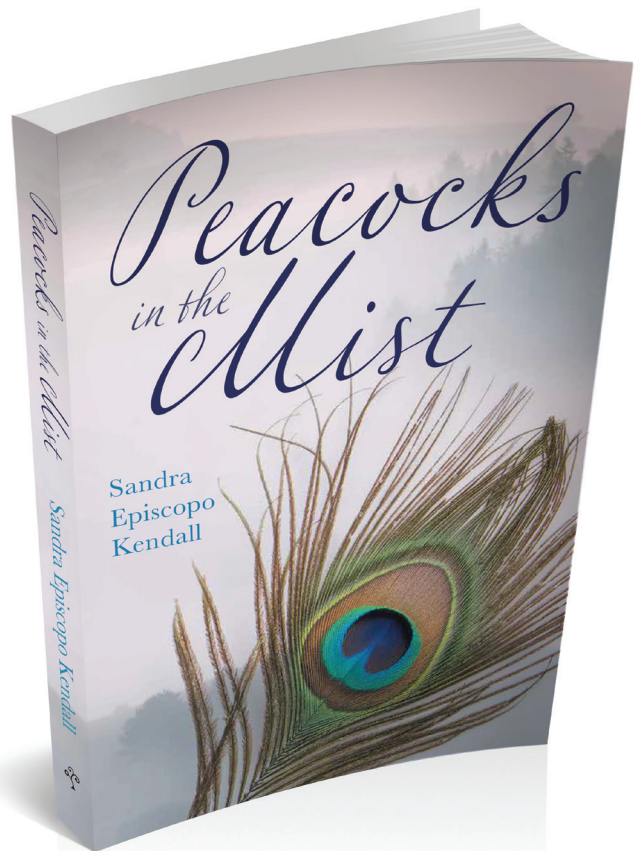

Rome, 1926. A young Italian girl, Minnie, has an unexpected opportunity to escape her poor, stifling, family life and move with newly made friends to India. Enchanted with its people and lifestyle, she eventually makes Bombay her home.

Returning to Italy in late middle age, Minnie becomes aware that her life has been divided over two continents. Each country feels alien yet familiar, distant yet close at hand. At ninety, she looks back on her life.

This is the story of courage, of adversity and heartbreak, of integration and alienation, and above all, of one woman's three passionate, turbulent love affairs, and an unresolved tragedy.

About the author

Sandra Episcopo Kendall was born in Rome of Italian parents. For twenty-five years she worked at three different Cambridge Colleges: Kings, Corpus Christi and Pembroke. Following her husband's death, she moved to Bristol. She enrolled in two residential Arvon Foundation courses at Lumb Bank where her tutor, author David Almond, encouraged her to keep writing. She now lives in the Cotswolds.

One woman, two continents, and three loves over a lifetime.
