

THE GIRLS OF TROY TRILOGY

FRANCES THOMAS

The story of the Trojan War seems at first to be very much a story for, and about, men. Apart from the faithless Helen who sets the whole thing off, all the action is played out by chaps; Agamemnon, Menelaus, Hector, Achilles, Odysseus, Ajax. But if you look carefully, you realise that, in the shadows, and out of the shadows, there are many girls and women with stories of their own...

Inspired by Greek mythology, The Girls of Troy Trilogy tells the gripping stories of Hermione, Eirene and Electra. Bursting with romance, tragedy, struggle, adventure and revenge this series is a “well-researched and thoroughly engrossing read” (Caroline Sanderson, The Bookseller).

About the Author

Frances Thomas was born in Wales, but has lived in London for most of her life. Some years ago, she and her historian husband moved to mid-Wales. She has written many books for adults and children. One of her recent children’s novels, Finding Minerva, won the Tir na nOg prize in 2008, and her picture book, Supposing, illustrated by Ross Collins, won a Scottish Arts Council Award in 1999.

Her biography of Christina Rossetti has been recently reprinted. As well as writing, she worked for many years teaching dyslexic children. She has two adult daughters and two grandchildren. Visit her website at francesthomas.org.
